“ I pray that God brings comfort and understanding to your family. That he wraps his arms around you and holds you in His peace. Sharing your story has ensured that I take this spider seriously, as every second counts, and your son's life was not without its gifts. I have learned from him.

To the Carlisle family, As someone who has lost a child I am heartbroken for your loss. May Heaven Above send you comfort and support at this desperately sad time. I can only believe that your dear little son was such a special spirit that he was called Home at such a tender age. I hope you know there are legions of people praying for your family. My deepest sympathies, Richard Whiteside

*To Branson's parents and other family members: Thank you so much for sharing your story with the world. What happened to your boy could certainly have been a private matter, but, instead, you chose to tell his story, and the world should thank you for that. Besides the important reminder about spiders, your story tells others that there are some good people still in this world. What your five-year-old son wished and planned for sending toys to Africa is simply amazing. Thank you for continuing to carry out his wish. I'm at a loss for words for you, as I'm sure that your heartache feels unbearable right now, and you obviously already have the faith that is most important in times likes these. When I experienced the loss of the person closest to me and the partial loss of the next-closest person to me (when I was living in Alabama a few years ago, actually), I was devastated (and often still feel heartbreak). While I can't compare my loss to yours fully, I want you to at least know that there are others who are crying with you and praying that God will grab hold of you and hold you close to Him for as long as you need.*
