Marlene was a woman of strong convictions, loving her Savior and her family deeply. She was a true warrior of a woman whose preferred weapon was prayer. When she prayed for you, you knew it. She believed deeply in caring for and giving to those who were in need, whether the need was a physical one or just some extra love and encouragement.

She had a wicked wit and sang constantly. Her singing usually blessed you with the old hymns, but she might also make up silly songs about what she was doing at the moment or you as the listener. She reveled in attending the activities of and supporting her grandchildren, cheering and applauding with gusto.
